

Kara Fulcher

Director of Sustainability, North America
Michelin

Kara S. Fulcher is Director of Sustainability for Michelin in North America, a role that coordinates across the entire organization, including industrial operations, commercial and external engagement, and strategy development. She has been part of the Michelin team since 2015, working in both regional and worldwide functions. Kara holds a PhD from Princeton University and an MBA from Clemson University. Having grown up in the ecologically fragile Navajo Nation in the desert southwest of the United States, she has a special and urgent interest in sustainability and climate action. Today after many moves across the US and western Europe, she calls Greenville, South Carolina, home.