Jean McNulty
Program Director
The Conference Board

Jean served as a Conference Portfolio Manager and Council Program Director for The Conference Board from 1992 until 2000. During this time she supervised a number of Program Directors in the development and production of conferences as well as serving as the Program Director for two Marketing Councils and a Brand Management Council. In 2000, she formed her own company, McNulty Associates, and served as a consultant to The Conference Board introducing over eight new conferences/seminars and two new councils. For the last ten years of her 21 year career with The Conference Board, she was the Program Director for four Councils: Leadership Development, two Chief Learning Officer Councils and the Talent Management Council I. In addition, she developed and produced four conferences in the subject areas of Leadership Development and Talent Management and two Succession Management Seminars. Jean retired in 2013 and has since been retained by the Board to on-board new Council Program Directors.

Previous experiences include positions in training and development for TWA and Decker Communications. She received a BS in Education and furthered her education by attending language schools in Paris, Florence and Athens. She speaks French, Italian and Greek.
