

David YoZZi

Executive VP & General Manager Workplace
Text Help

David YoZZi's background includes a blend of academic expertise in adult education, sales leadership, organizational consulting, and global program development. His background spans multiple sectors from Education, Publishing, Professional Services, Social Media to Technology. His professional trajectory is marked by consistent success, from his early years in the academic realm to leadership roles at renowned organizations such as IBM, Duke Corporate Education, Pearson, Dell, HP, Medidata, Twitter, and Conde Nast. As the EVP of Workplace Sales, David will leads sales for Texthelp's workplace division globally, while overseeing a high-performing sales team. His role focuses on streamlining and expanding Workplace sales, fostering a data-driven performance culture, and collaborating with partners to enhance market reach. Alongside, he contributes to building a world-class organization, optimizing sales processes, and proactively managing the team's performance to maintain Texthelp's prominence in the SaaS space. Diagnosed with dyslexia at a young age, David has effectively leveraged his academic and sales career to bring awareness to the unique contributions individuals with diverse learning differences can make in the workplace as well as the rest of their lives.