

Jamie Williams

Senior Director of Scholarships and Enrichment Programs
Coca-Cola Scholars Foundation

Jamie Williams, Ed.D., serves as Senior Director of Scholarships and Enrichment Programs for the Coca-Cola Scholars Foundation, managing curriculum-based leadership and professional enrichment programs as well as the scholar selection process, which identifies 150 recipients each year from more than 200,000 applicants. Prior to joining Coca-Cola in 2015, he was director of the National Scholars Program at Clemson (S.C.) University from 2002-2015, in addition to serving as associate director of the Clemson Honors College from 2009-2015. In 2006, Jamie led the effort to create USPAA, the Undergraduate Scholars Program Administrators Association, a professional body supporting the work of campus-based scholars programs, and served as president and a board member from 2009-2013. Jamie has also led enrollment, advising, and leadership programs at Emory University and Georgia State University.
