Marion Feigenbaum

Senior Vice President, Member Engagement

Marion Feigenbaum is senior vice president of member engagement for The Conference Board. She is responsible for a portfolio of 400 annual meetings, and programs for senior executives that attract over 10,000 attendees, members, and speakers annually. The meetings and briefings held by The Conference Board address virtually every important issue facing business today.

Feigenbaum's career at The Conference Board began in the economics department, where she conducted research on manufacturers' capital appropriations. She has also held positions as manager of finance and director of conference operations. Previously, she was manager of finance at ActMedia in Norwalk, Connecticut.

Feigenbaum has a degree in economics from Barnard College of Columbia University.
