Asia Decoded

Priyanka Kishore is the Founder and Principal Economist of Asia Decoded, an independent macro advisory helping businesses navigate a more contested global economy. Her work centres on the forces reshaping how and where companies operate in Asia. With more than two decades of experience across Asian markets, she advises firms on supply chains, trade and investment realignments, and the broader geoeconomic competition now shaping boardroom decisions.

Priyanka regularly chairs roundtables for business leaders, briefs boards, and presents on macroeconomic and geopolitical issues at industry, policy, and markets forums. She has written book chapters, policy briefs and articles for the ADB, APEC and other leading economic institutions, and is a guest speaker at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy on Asian economics and geopolitics.

Priyanka is also a columnist for Nikkei Asia Review, and her commentary has appeared in the Financial Times, Project Syndicate and Bloomberg Businessweek Vietnam. She appears frequently on Bloomberg, CNBC, BBC and CNA.

Earlier, Priyanka was Chief India and Southeast Asia Economist at Oxford Economics, and before that a senior economist and strategist in the banking sector.
