The Conference Board (Canada)
awhite@tcb.org

Anne White leads Knowledge Partnerships and Insights, Canada at The Conference Board, developing strategic research and convening partnerships with Members on their business and societal priorities. These partnerships harness The Conference Board's global data, benchmarking, and executive networks to deliver trusted insights for what's ahead at the intersection of business performance and societal prosperity for Canada.

For over two decades, Anne's work has spanned business leadership, government performance, and civic engagement, driving results in individual organizations and developing shared governance structures to improve collective outcomes. She spent a decade as an executive in the Government of Canada, focused on results and execution at the Privy Council Office, modernization at the Canada Revenue Agency, and the implementation of national strategies at Natural Resources Canada. Prior to this, she was a founding team member of the Harvard Kennedy School Government Performance Lab and of the UK Institute for Government. She served as Director of the Toronto Board of Trade while building her early career at TELUS.

A data analyst by training, Anne is a Certified Social & Behavioral Research Investigator and an Agentic AI Organizational Transformation Leader. She holds a dual Master of Public Administration / Master of Public Affairs from the London School of Economics and Sciences Po (Paris), with a focus on econometrics and organizational performance, and an Honours Bachelor of Business Administration from the Ivey Business School at Western University. Anne is fluently bilingual in English and French.
