

Access to Experts

Jonathan Rothwell

Senior Research Associate and Associate Fellow, Metropolitan Policy Program
Brookings Institution

Jonathan Rothwell is a senior research associate and associate fellow at the Metropolitan Policy Program at the Brookings Institution, where he researches a variety of economics issues. He has devised new ways to measure economic concepts, including exports from metropolitan areas, skill mismatch, “green” jobs, land-use regulation, STEM skills, social capital, and housing costs near high-quality schools. His work has been cited by many national and regional media outlets, including the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal. He is a frequent blogger and has published in a number of leading academic journals. He earned a B.S. from Penn State, a M.A. in economics from the New School, and a Ph.D. in policy from Princeton University.

Contact Carol Courter, Manager, Corporate Communications, +1 212 339 0232, courter@conferenceboard.org

The Conference Board is a global, independent business membership and research association working in the public interest. Our mission is unique: to provide the world’s leading organizations with the practical knowledge they need to improve their performance and better serve society. The Conference Board is a non-advocacy, not-for-profit entity holding 501 (c)(3) tax-exempt status in the United States of America.

www.conference-board.org