Mike Abrams

Founder
Four Block
Author of Networking for Veterans

Mike Abrams is a research associate for the Center for Talent Innovation, where he focuses on leadership and performance management. Prior to joining in 2013, he served two tours in the Marine Corps which included a deployment to eastern Afghanistan with an infantry company as the artillery forward observer. After leaving active-duty, Mike attended New York University's Stern School of Business, graduating with an M.B.A. in Finance and Entrepreneurship & Innovation. While in business school, he co-founded a veteran mentoring program called Four Block Diversity Leadership. The program focuses on providing professional development to student-veterans and connecting them with internship opportunities and entry-level positions at corporations. He is the author of a military transition guidebook called Networking for Veterans.
