

David A. Dye, PhD

Senior Fellow, Human Capital
The Conference Board
President
Dye Leadership Consulting LLC

David Dye is a Senior Fellow in the Human Capital Center at The Conference Board and President, Dye Leadership Consulting LLC. He has over 35 years of leadership and management consulting experience contributing to the improved performance of employees, work teams, and organizations. As a certified Executive Coach, David helps organizations reimagine their leadership model and work with current and future leaders to be prepared for the workplace of tomorrow to achieve balance, fulfillment, and purpose in their professional and personal lives.

Prior to starting his own business, David worked for mid- and large-size management consulting firms helping clients develop and align their human capital efforts to achieve strategy, mission, and purpose. Over the course of his career, David has brought a research and practice mindset to clients, where he has led groundbreaking research, work with high-performing executives to achieve personal goals, and lead complex organizational transformations. David is a Past President of the Personnel Testing Council of Metropolitan Washington (PTC-MW) and the International Personnel Assessment Council (IPAC). He received his Ph.D. from The George Washington University in Industrial and Organizational Psychology. He holds Board positions with the University of Maryland Baltimore Campus and with the MEECO Institute. He serves on the adjunct faculty for the Kogod School of Business at American University. He is a frequent contributor to news and media outlets, and has presented internationally and published book chapters and articles in various professional journals.