Rita Shor
Program Director
The Conference Board
rita.shor@conferenceboard.org

Rita Shor is co-leader of the Innovation and Digital Transformation Institute, program director for the Product and Service Development Council, and co-directs the Innovation and Applied Innovation Councils at The Conference Board.

Past work for The Conference Board includes co-directing four of the annual Innovation Master Class conferences, directing seven additional conferences, participating in more than 20 webcasts, and supporting leadership experiential learning sessions in the Silicon Valley.

Shor spent 34 years as a product development, innovation, and business growth practitioner at 3M and as project manager for the BioBusiness Alliance of Minnesota's long-term strategic planning project, Destination 2025. She led new product growth for a variety of 3M businesses, including occupational health, automotive adhesive, and medical-surgical applications. Her team's work with the infection prevention platform for medical-surgical products was published in Harvard Business Review (HBR) and has been used as an HBR case for the Lead User Research method (a case widely used at business schools, internationally).
