Marc Gasperino is responsible for leading the firm's digital initiatives across the Americas. His diverse experience and comprehension of the digital ecosystem and its influence on emerging and transitioning markets and talent requirements distinguishes his practice, enabling him to serve clients across the technology, media and entertainment, consumer, financial services, life sciences and industrial sectors. His team specializes in digital leadership and transformation and has successfully recruited transitional leaders for companies at various stages of their development from early stage start-ups to FTN 500 companies.

Clients have entrusted Mr. Gasperino and his team with the identification of accomplished professionals to assume C-level, Board and critical digital lifecycle roles ranging from customer outreach and acquisition, product development and user experience and analytics.

Previously Mr. Gasperino was the Managing Partner of the Global Digital Practice for CTPartners where he spent over ten years. He started his search career as head of Northeast operations for Corporate Information Systems, a high-tech search firm serving the technology industry. As an executive trainer with GE Capital Corporation, he deepened his understanding of leadership and assessment capabilities and gained an appreciation and aptitude for Six Sigma training and implementation.

Mr. Gasperino earned a bachelor's degree in Psychology from Marist College in Poughkeepsie, NY
