

Amanda Gardiner

VP Sustainability and Social Innovation
Pearson

Amanda is VP of Sustainability & Social Innovation at Pearson, where she focuses on integrating social, economic, and environmental issues into business strategy and operations, and ensuring the company delivers value to low-income, underserved communities.

Amanda previously worked at UNDP leading the "Business Call to Action", and at the International Business Leaders Forum advising corporate executives on sustainability strategy, partnerships, and responsible business practices in emerging markets.

She chairs the Board of Directors for Children in Conflict, an NGO delivering support to children affected by war, and serves on the Board of The Partnering Initiative, an NGO dedicated to driving effective cross-sector collaboration.
