Chris Ettery
Director, Social & Environmental Responsibility, Supply Chain
Dell Technologies

Chris Ettery currently leads the Social & Environmental Responsibility organization at Dell. In this role, he oversees Dell’s work to ensure a socially and environmentally responsible and resilient supply chain, leading teams in the US and China. Dell’s work in this field focuses on risk mitigation, working in collaboration with suppliers, building insight and expertise to maintain social and environmental standards as well as driving circular economy efforts. The work of the team has been recognized by Gartner, Institute of Public and Environmental Affairs (China) and Responsible Business Alliance.

Prior to Dell, Chris worked in sustainability and communications roles in the construction materials sector, most notably for French multi-national Lafarge (latterly LafargeHolcim). Chris managed national and international teams for Lafarge for a number of different roles, heading up communications and sustainability reporting for its UK entity as well as joining the corporate team as a member of the Group function’s leadership team. During this period, his work won awards from Business in the Community and Dow Jones Sustainability Initiative. He was also a member of the team managing the merger process between Lafarge and Holcim.

Chris has also worked for NGOs and in the public sector in France, Australia and UK. He is a graduate from University of Exeter, UK and is based in Ireland.
