

Dana M. Peterson

Chief Economist and Leader, Economy, Strategy & Finance Center
The Conference Board

Dana M. Peterson is the Chief Economist and Leader of the Economy, Strategy & Finance Center at The Conference Board.

Prior to this, she served as a North America Economist and later as a Global Economist at Citi, the world's largest investment bank. Her wealth of experience extends to the public sector, having also worked at the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, D.C.

Dana's wide-ranging economics portfolio includes analyzing global themes having direct financial market implications, including monetary policy; inflation; labor markets; fiscal and trade policy; debt; taxation; consumption; and demographics. Her work also examines myriad U.S. themes leveraging granular data.

Peterson's research has been featured by U.S. and international news outlets, both in print and broadcast. Publications and networks include CNBC, FOX Business, Bloomberg, BBC, Thomson-Reuters, CNN Finance, Yahoo Finance, TD Ameritrade, Harvard Business Review, Barron's, the Financial Times, and the Wall Street Journal.

Dana is a member of the Board of Directors of NBER and the Global Interdependence Center, and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, the New York Association for Business Economics (NYABE), NBEIC, and the Forecasters Club.

She received an undergraduate degree in Economics from Wesleyan University and a Master of Science degree in Economics from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.