

Admiral Michael S. Rogers, USN (RET)

Former Commander, U.S. Cyber Command and Director
National Security Agency

Admiral Rogers is a member of the Board of Directors or Advisory Board or acts as a Senior Advisor to multiple companies in the private sector from public companies to start-ups to non-profits. He also works in the venture capital arena and speaks globally to various business and academic groups while working internationally in the areas of cyber, technology, leadership and global security. He is also a Senior Fellow and Adjunct Professor with Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management and is a member of the U.S. Advisory Board of the Australian American Leadership Dialogue. Prior to that, he served in the U.S. Navy for nearly 37 years culminating his service in uniform in 2018 with a four year plus tour as both the Commander, U.S. Cyber Command and Director, National Security Agency – establishing the DoD's then newest combatant command and leading one of world's largest intelligence organization. He is a graduate of Auburn University and holds a Masters in National Security (East Asia) and is a distinguished graduate of the National War College and a graduate of highest distinction from the Naval War College. He is also an MIT Seminar XXI Fellow and a Harvard Senior Executive in National Security alum.