Maternity Through Elder Care
SEMINAR

The Great Health Care Reset: Meeting Employee Needs Through the Arc of Life

Virtual Event
November 9–10, 2020

www.conferenceboard.org/lifetimehealthcare
COVID-19 has put a spotlight on the critical contribution of health care to economic and social well-being. This session explores the impact and opportunities in three junctures of health and benefits management: fertility and childbirth; chronic or acute disease diagnosis; and the declining health of parents.

We will explore how leading companies are helping employees navigate the “arc of” health care needs, while maintaining the quality of their work and providing more holistic and flexible strategies.

We will discuss ways employers can develop cost-effective programs to meet fertility and maternity care, acute care, and eldercare challenges. Laws, regulations, and research are daily changing what we know and how medical care is delivered in these areas--and this session will help employers make sense of those changes.

After attending this seminar, you will be able to:

- Identify how COVID-19 has accelerated health care trends in three critical areas of maternity, acute care, and elder care that affect your workforce;
- Define new areas of vulnerability and opportunity that impact employee experience and productivity such as telehealth, analytics, and well-being.
- Act on these new opportunities to enhance quality of care and patient experience, and better manage overall health care costs.

General Session A

Health Care Without Walls: Transforming Our Health Care Delivery in Times of Crisis and Overwhelming Need

The current crisis of affordability and access in health care, worsened by the coronavirus pandemic, puts a spotlight on the urgent need for health care transformation and accelerated adoption of new delivery and payment models. Healthcare thought leader and author Susan Dentzer will share how data and technology hold the potential to help transform care as it moves outside the conventional walls of institutions and practices to bring care closer to patients and consumers in their homes and communities. These changes hold the potential to improve care, increase patient satisfaction, and reduce costs, and especially to address needs in maternity and family care. At the same time, these changes won’t be as widespread as they could be without a push from health care purchasers and payers, and the encouragement of health policy. We’ll discuss how organizations can take advantage of the new opportunities and push further in the direction of transformed care.

The First Women’s Recession: Top Workplaces Talk Retaining Parents with Best-in-class Benefits

Women are leaving the workforce at four times the rate of men, due in large part to the ongoing caregiving crisis created by Covid-19—and threatening to roll back decades of progress for diversity in the workplace. Join a conversation with benefits experts from two industry-leading companies: science and technology conglomerate Danaher and financial tech firm SoFi. They’ll share best practices for supporting and retaining parents, improving employee health and wellbeing, and creating inclusive cultures. Hear from Danaher and SoFi why they’re partnering with Maven to deliver employee-centered virtual care and personalized benefits for employees who are planning, starting, and raising a family.

Moderator:

Kate Ryder, Founder & CEO, Maven

General Session C

Supporting the Path to Parenthood and Parenting

The path to parenthood can be a complex and arduous process, especially during the COVID-19 crisis. Studies show women experiencing infertility attribute the inability to conceive as having the most negative impact on their emotional health. Join this panel to discover strategies for rolling out a fertility and family-building benefit amidst unexpected timeline and budget constraints. We’ll discuss how direct purchasing with a provider like Kindbody allows employers to leverage technology and virtual care to reinvent their family-building benefits, including the patient and employee experience, high quality of care, and successful clinical outcomes. As both the benefit provider and the doctors, Kindbody supports members no matter where they are along their journey or where they are located around the globe – all at affordable prices. Hear from

How Top Employers Retain 90% of Parents: A Proven Toolkit for Training Managers

Nearly eight times more women than men dropped out of the workforce in September alone. And without the added challenges brought on by the pandemic, retaining women was already an issue: 43% leave the workforce within one year of returning from parental leave. But companies who use Maven’s comprehensive return-to-work support have a 90% return-to-work rate for new parents. Why? The companies we work with tell us that one thing really sets us apart for their employees during this critical period: we train people managers and equip them with practical tools to support parents before, during, and after parental leave. In this session, an expert career coach will share Maven’s exclusive training for managers to give you actionable tips that you can take back to your company. Walk away with a practical checklist for your managers—our most in-demand tool used by some of the top workplaces for parents.

Sustaining Diversity, Inclusion and Equity in the Great Health Care Reset
Combined with social unrest, the health care playing field has changed, the status quo disrupted, not to return. This disruption calls for a need to rethink standards, practices and procedures in light of equity outcomes. What have we learned about what’s working and what’s not during this time of unprecedented stress in our health care ecosystem? How can we use measures and analytics to assess and address disparity in these health care outcomes? This session will offer practical things that organizations can do to sustain diversity, inclusion and equity outcomes with their organizations and management teams.
